

Center ^{for} Health & Safety Culture

Positive Culture Framework Training

DISNEY
SPRINGS

May 10th - 12th

Orlando, Florida

The Center for Health and Safety Culture at Montana State University invites you to attend a newly developed training on our updated approach which is based on the latest research and builds on the Positive Community Norms framework. The framework embraces a cultural approach, is grounded in the latest science, and includes positive norms in improving health and safety.

This 2.5 day training provides a foundation for efforts to improve health and safety addressing a wide variety of issues including (but not limited to) substance abuse, traffic safety, and violence prevention. Participants will leave with an understanding of how culture influences behavior, how we can cultivate cultural transformation, and the benefits of a comprehensive, positive approach.

The training covers our revised process and initiates the development of your skills in three critical areas: leadership, communication, and the integration of effective strategies. Participants will leave with specific next steps for implementing this process for transforming culture to achieve community health and safety goals.

We have updated our training to be more interactive and enhanced our materials to better support your learning. This is an excellent opportunity for you to engage with others doing similar work across the country and begin your journey towards cultivating a culture that supports improved health and safety.

Where:

Hilton Orlando Lake Buena Vista
located in Disney Springs

When:

May 10th - 12th, 2016

Cost:

$675; includes registration,
breakfast, materials, and snacks.

For more information about the location of the training or to register please visit:

<http://chsculture.org/services/training/>.

Please send questions to:

mail@chsculture.org.