The Substance Abuse and Mental Health Administration (SAMHSA) created a new Training Tool Box for Addressing the Gender-Specific Service Needs of Women (draft). It is a resource to help trainers educate the workforce about the gender-specific needs of women with substance use disorders (SUDs).

The Tool Box allows trainers to create evidence-based, customized trainings. Attendees will leave with the resources and skills to better serve women, train staff and others about gender-responsive services, and make a compelling case for effective SUD interventions for women. This webinar will:

- Offer an overview of the Training Tool Box and gender-responsive SUD services.
- Teach attendees how to plan and deliver quality training and presentations on serving women with SUDs.
- Provide all Tool Box resources (including fully designed PowerPoint presentations).
